To whom it may concern:

Hello ! My name is Cain Susko, and I am a student in the School of Computing at Queen's University.

During my time studying, I have learned that computing is the science of systems. This was a breakthrough for me as I immediately saw how everything is a system – and thus the theories of computing and information science can be applied to nearly anything. This not only made me more passionate about trying to develop systems – but also gave me a new purpose to try and optimize the systems around me; allowing me to develop my skills as a computer scientist on a personal level.

I would be over the moon if you might consider me for a position – as I have an insatiable desire to learn more; and I would be so grateful to experience what different company cultures and ideas have to offer in the field of computing.

Thank you for your time and consideration – and I look forward to your response.

Kindly,

Cain Susko
